

Part I: Comprehensive text

First paragraph: Why are there such questions? “in each case....communication process?” what does the author mean by these questions?

*The onset is not only to consider these questions but also to attract the readers.
Last question is to introduce the subject as it is states at the end of the first paragraph.*

Second paragraph: How can the intrapersonal communication be defined as acts of imagination and visualization? Why does the term “acts” be in plural? What does the author mean by “sights, sounds, and scents”. Give an example of each. How do these last questions have relationship with intrapersonal communication?

Since you experienced or you have been in that restaurant. Many things come in your mind. Thus, you create your own scene involves different sens of humain being such as sights (location, environment...), sounds (music, people, dishes....), and scents (smell of meals, parfum....). This example can be applied in other topics or subjects....

Third paragraph: Why does the author consider the eight basic components as a transactional? In your mind what does the expression “you deserve some time off!” affect you?

The term transaction is usually used in the finance. In fact, it means to transfer a specific amount of money from an account to another. This term was used by the author because alike a bank transaction, communication involves a sender, who transfers the message to the receiver (receipt), through different channels (face to face, technology...).

Depending on the context, this expression indicates a need for a break, a hope (wish), an excuse.....

Fourth paragraph: To plan to resolve the problem, someone is struggling with him/herself by using evaluation and judgments. Explain. In the text, there are the terms ‘add’ and ‘others’. Why do they have to do with intrapersonal communication?

The goal is to realize or to achieve a project, an idea....

The author used the term add because he explained the basic definition of the intrapersonal communication. In addition, the environment (ex: other people) affects significantly intrapersonal communication.

Fifth paragraph: Since we are talking about internal communication explain why does the author mention this expression “and all of it relies.....with the external world”? Why language, culture, and legacy are so important when you argue? Do you agree with the last sentence?

Mentioned in the previous question. Because language, culture, and legacy make up your personality and thus yourself.
